Day 02: Cusco – Sacred Valley – Cusco

Breakfast at the hotel. Excursion to the Sacred valley of the Incas.

Visit the native fair in Písaq, trip along the Sacred River (Vilcanota) on paved road, arrival at Urubamba, lunch buffet, trip to Ollantaytambo town and fortress, back to Cusco through Chinchero (Cusco Plateau). This beautiful and inviting valley between Písaq and Ollantaytambo was esteemed by our ancestors due to the especial conditions it has like: beneficial climate, generous fertility of its land and the presence of the Wilcamayu or Sacred River. The andean man, encouraged by the goods Mother land provided, made architectural works related to agriculture which was the main activity developed in the old Peru. In this zone, the Incas found an appropriate place to leave examples of their wide knowledge on hydraulics and their deep love for nature. For example we can see aqueducts, watering canals course control of the Wilcamayu, farming plateaus and worship centers to the Pachamama or Mother Land; for all this, it is known as the Sacred Valley of the Incas.

Písaq, pictures que town with half-breed-colonial appearance. It is located in the province of Calca at the beginning of the Sacred Valley of the Incas, 32 km from Cusco. It was founded during the Viceroy ship of Francisco de Toledo. They offer several crafts, being textiles and ceramics the most important. Every Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday there are craft fairs in the main square.

On Sundays, the people have the native market and celebrate the traditional mass in Quechua language with the attendance of the Varayocs or native Mayors.

Ollantaytambo, huge agricultural, administrative, religious and military complex of the tawantinsuyo, 97 km away from Cusco. You can see the architectural style of its streets and fields as mainly pre-Hispanic, huge polyhedrons form the walls trapezoidal portals of temples and palace. In the highest part and oriental of the city, we can see a mountain which keeps countless pre-Hispanics constructions such as temples and farming plateaus. The main Temple stands out with the façade formed by six red monoliths perfectly assembled together. It shows stepped molding which determines the land. Back to Cusco through Chinchero.

Chinchero, old agricultural Inca center, district of the province of Urubamba, consisting of 10 ayllus or native communities. It is at 3762 m.a.s.l. and at 29 km from Cusco, with beautiful Andean Pumasillo or "La Veronica". The typical Sunday market where native peasants come from several communities to buy or trade, features the artisan textiles of the area.
